The 1977 Coahoma depicts the flat, rich, fertile, soil of the Mississippi Delta, where hospitality flows as freely and sincerely as the Mississippi River. All of these qualities are exemplified by the Coahoman family with dignity and pride.

This publication further endeavors to establish a rapport between the old and the new Coahoma Junior College family and the Community.

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

Greetings,

The Mississippi Delta, the beautiful flat land of the great State of Mississippi, abounds in human and natural resources. Coahoma Junior College has made great strides in providing training in the utilization of these human and natural resources.

We at Coahoma Junior College believe that the fundamental purpose of education is to see that human beings shall have proper guidance in the process of maturing. To this end our faculty and staff devote their efforts toward solving the problems of individual students according to individual needs.

The broad range of our programs enables us to serve a truly diverse clientele without regard to race, sex, color, creed, or national origin. Both young and older adults find that Coahoma Junior College is in fact an "OPEN BOOK" in the heart of the Delta.

Respectfully yours,

James E. Miller

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Timothy Lee Brown
GEMINI

In producing a good yearbook there are many enormous tasks one must perform. The members of the 1976-77 Coahoman staff have put forth strenuous efforts in showing an "Open Book to the Delta." We have tried to show the past, present, and future here at CJC.

There were times when virtually everything backfired, but with cooperation of many of our friends, we have tried to make this yearbook a successful one.

I am very proud to be your 1976-77 yearbook editor.

I have enjoyed the many challenges and triumphs that are so inevitably a part of this position. My staff and I wish to thank everyone who has taken part in helping to produce this publication.

May the 1976-77 COAHOMAN serve as a history of our lives here at CJC.
